

Design is Responsive to Identified Needs

Stage One: Identify what you need and how you will know if you are successful.

Stage Two: What materials and opportunities are available to you?

Stage Three: What information have you gathered from the shelter information to help with your design?

Stage Four: Design your prototype

Stage Five: Build your prototype

Stage Six: Reflect on prototype. What was not successful? What was successful? What will you do differently next time?